What Do Marks On Report Cards Mean?

By Prof. Clarence Uhl
Our children have received their report cards. These reports are supposed to give the parents a clear idea of just what the children are accomplishing in school. What do these reports mean to us? When we have looked at them and signed them do we have a definite idea of what has happened in the life of the child?

I must confess, I do not have much faith in grades. They may seem definite, so definite that they are deceiving. If a child receives 77 per cent in reading, we think that we know exactly what the child has accomplished, but do we? An article on the card itself informs us that 77 per cent means a grade of "C" which means Fair. Fair is a little more definite than the other two symbols but do we know what the teacher had in mind when she gave the mark? In 1912 and 13 Starch and Elliott made investigations to determine whether different teachers grade a certain piece of work alike. Hectographed copies of ungraded, examination papers together with the questions were sent out as follows: Two final examinations in first year English, one final examination paper in Geometry was graded by 118 teachers, and one final examination paper in American History was graded by 70 teachers. The teachers were asked to grade the papers just as they would their own pupils papers. The differences are astounding, the marks for any given paper run practically over the entire percentage scale ordinarily used. The marks on the first English paper ranged from 64 to 98 per cent, on the second English paper from 50 to 98 per cent, on the Geometry paper 28 to 92 per cent, and on the History paper from 43 to 90 per cent. Such results gave Educators a shock. They then set about to make and advise the making of exams whose answers would be either right or wrong. The scores on such a test were to be arranged from highest to lowest. Then assuming that pure chance was working in choosing the children who attend a certain class the teacher arranges the marks according to the bell shaped curve of normal frequency.

This normal frequency is 24 per cent to receive "A" or Excellent, 24 per cent to receive "B" or Good, 38 per cent to receive "C" or Fair, 24 per cent to receive "D" or Poor, and 7 per cent "F" or failure. In a class of thirty students let us suppose that a certain examination contained one hundred questions and the highest score made by the class was 50 out of the possible 100, the highest two pupils—7 per cent of 30 would receive "A", about 7 would receive "B" or Good, 12 would receive "C" or Fair, 7 would receive "D" or Poor, and 2 would receive "F" or Failure. The teacher is not supposed to follow the plan mechanically but over a period of years her marks should conform to it. My criticism of this method is, the one who received "A" really failed, too. If the hundred questions were a true sampling of the understandings that the children were supposed to have grasped the results show that even the best student had been doing very poor work. This method covers up the weak spots but some professors of Education use the system and advocate its use by teachers. Maybe the whole class was loafing. For example, I have a few times handed in papers of which I was actually ashamed. I been busy with other things did not give them the proper attention. I have received A's on papers through this ranking system. Whenever I received an A on any work which was the result of anything less than my best effort I was disappointed and disgusted. To me a piece of work has not been done in an excellent manner unless it is the very best that one child can do. Dr. Morrison of the University of Chicago says "Ranking is a method of social appraisal which we had fondly hoped that America had sloughed off."

Mokena Telephone Manager Files Bill For Divorce

Mrs. Carrie Foreman, Illinois Bell Telephone Company manager at Mokena, has filed a bill for divorce against her husband, Fred Foreman in the Will County Circuit court at Joliet the past week. In her bill Mrs. Foreman states she was united in marriage with Mr. Foreman at Kankakee on April 12, 1911. To this union two sons were born, Everett and Gerald. Mrs. Foreman further sets forth that she has always conducted herself as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife, but that wholly regardless of his marriage vows, her husband deserted her October 20, 1922 and absented himself without any reasonable cause for the space of two years and upwards and has persisted in such desertion and continues so.

Mrs. Foreman says she has cared for and supported her children since October 20th, 1922. She states she has not seen or heard from her husband since May 10, 1926, that she has made diligent inquiry and search among the former friends and relatives of her husband, but has been unable to learn his present residence and address and asks that the marriage be dissolved and declared null and void. She asks the court to decree her the care and custody of the minor children. The case is set for hearing November first. Oscar R. Lakaway is the complainant's solicitor. Mrs. Foreman was appointed manager for the Illinois Bell Telephone Co., at Mokena June the first, coming here from Herscher, Ill.

Auto Crashes

Into House

A peculiar accident happened on Front street in Mokena late Saturday night when a Ford car crashed into the Carl Mau residence. The car was driven by a young man by the name of Mueller from Frankfort, son of Ernest Mueller, former Frankfort deputy who was killed a few years ago, and when the car hit a depression in the street, the jar broke the wish bone of the car, causing the steering apparatus to be useless. Mr. Mueller heard the crack of the breaking part and sought to step on the brake but instead stepped on the gas and the car shot ahead, swerved off the street and crashed into the Mau building. The front end of the car struck beneath a bedroom window. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ridell of Chicago recently moved in this dwelling and Mrs. Ridell and two small children were asleep in the room when the crash came. Mrs. Ridell was so frightened that she was seized with a nervous chill from which she did not recover until Sunday morning. Mr. Ridell was in another room listening to the radio. He heard his wife scream and rushed to the bedroom and was surprised to see the wreckage. The force of the impact crushed in the window sill pushing it into the room. Two large windows were broken and the broken glass showered in the room. Luckily no one was hurt. Mr. Mueller agreed to make good the damage. The car was badly damaged and was taken to the Cooper & Hostert garage for repairs.

BUY SEVENTY ACRE TRACT ON HARLEM NEAR PALOS PARK
Carl E. D. Anderson and Benjamin Nelson have bought seventy acres fronting half a mile on Harlem Ave., and bounded by 119th and 123rd Sts., Palos Park, from James D. Brady for a reported $2,500 an acre. They will hold the property temporarily at least.

along with various other childish practices which feudalism bequeathed to Europe." He also advises that it has no place in a democracy. It gives some superiority complexes and others inferiority complexes on an unsound basis of judging true worth.

VOTE "NO"

on the Proposed Revenue Amendment, says Clarence Cleveland, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Milk Producers Association

Mr. Cleveland declares "the proposal to amend our State Constitution by removing all restrictions and limitations from our present tax spread, to be a very dangerous step."

"Farmers are being told that the adoption of the proposed amendment would tend to bring about a reduction in the very high tax which we are now compelled to pay each year toward the support of our state and local governments, while as a matter of fact the amendment merely gives our Illinois Legislature the right to increase our taxes as they may see fit."

"Our last General Assembly passed appropriation bills exceeding by nearly twelve million dollars the amount which could legally be imposed upon us in taxes. Had it not been for the limitations which now protect us from further excessive taxation, we would of course be compelled to assume that additional burden."

"Our present constitution prohibits the taxing of church and school property while the proposed amendment would remove that exemption along with all other limitations."

Illinois State expenditures have increased at such a tremendous rate during the last few years that we have now reached the very highest legal notch."

"The cost of keeping our fair State in good running order has jumped from $20,208,146 for 1907 to $285,907,382 for 1925 and 1926 according to available figures. Now we are asked to take the lid entirely off so that the honorable members of our legislature may be spared the annoyance of reductions in their pet appropriation bills covering every imaginable grab from salary raises and political jobs for friends, to State parks in every town or hamlet."

"If adopted, the proposed amendment places with our State legislature the right to take from cities, towns and villages, the power to levy taxes for their own support."

"The claim is made by proponents of the proposed amendment that our Legislature would if given an opportunity, enact laws imposing a tax on our hidden securities such as bonds and stocks, etc."

"I should like to ask, 'what is to prevent such action under our present revenue laws?'" One state has an act which invalidates any stocks, bonds, etc., not declared for taxation. Vote "No!"

Zerbs Garage At Orland Robbed

Sunday night burglars broke into the garage of Adolph Zerbs at Orland and stole 14 casings, 20 inner tubes, a cash register and $52 in cash. The total loss is about $600. Entrance was gained thru a side door. Mr. Zerbs discovered the robbery when he opened the garage Monday morning. So far no trace has been found of the thieves of the stolen goods.

Tinley Residents To Fight Paving

Tinley Park is having a street paving fight on its hands now. Recently the residents on Kirchen St. got together and favored the building of a concrete street costing approximately $17,000. Since the plans have been finished and the matter of the preparation of an assessment roll has been taken to court, several of the residents of this street have decided to fight the matter, thinking the cost too high. Attorney A. H. Krusemark of Frankfort has been engaged to represent the objecting property owners. The outcome of the case is watched with much interest for according to law the local Board of Improvement says they have the right to go ahead and build this street over the objections of the property owners.

Pay For Mushrooms

The woodland of Albert Fitzer south of Mokena has been covered with mushrooms of late. Last week several carloads of mushroom hunters from Chicago and Joliet came out and got loads of them without asking permission of the owner. Deputy Clarence Cleveland was called on and got the mushroom hunters to pay for the mushrooms. Some parties had over $25 worth of the vegetables and were asked to pay $5 for them. They at first tried to bribe the deputy with one dollar and some cigars and when this did not work tried to get wise but finally came to time.

Deputy Cleveland says that recently some of these hunters threatened him with a knife. Mushrooms when purchased in the city cost 80c a pound while the hunters get them for nothing. Some easy profit and soft picking.

Overloaded trucks are being watched on the Lincoln Highway. Thursday morning Motor Cycle cop Ed. Sippel caught three overloaded trucks on this highway at the four corners north of Frankfort. The drivers will appear in court at Joliet.

Reid who defended him in his late court-martial proceedings, and in whose honor this gathering is given.

Irvin Bettenhausen had quite an exciting experience the other day. The car shot away from him and made two backward turns across the street, striking a Ford coupe in front of the Peter Parent place taking one wheel off.

Village Hall Proposition Wins

Worth is to have a new village hall. At a recent special election held to decide whether bonds should be issued for the purpose of building a village hall. The result was a victory for the hall proposition by a vote of 53 to 48. Only about one half of the voters turned out which is rather surprising considering the issue involved.

Have Thrilling Experience

Mrs. Herman Ramien and sons Lewis and Arthur of Cullom, Ill., who visited last week at the home of W. W. Palmer had a thrilling experience. Coming thru the flooded district near the Vermillion River, they were obliged to push their car for half a mile. The water was so deep that the oil in the transmission case was lost, making it necessary for one member of the party to walk several miles for oil and other essentials. They declared that conditions in some places are

R. J. Wilson, W. W. Palmer, George Lucas and Kenneth Lucas motored down to the flooded district near Morris, Ill., last week. They saw vast fields of oats and corn utterly ruined. Mr. Palmer declares we do not realize how fortunate we are here. The same party plan on taking a trip to Beardstown, Peoria and other places in the flooded district.

Sunday evening soon, Rev. Forrest A. Fields, pastor of the M. E. church at Tinley Park, will preach for us at Mokena. Mr. Fields has a long record as preacher in spite of his youth; he began preaching at the age of eighteen and for a long time was known as "the boy preacher of Oklahoma". All will want to hear him. BARÉE, Son of Kazan

—20—

He mumbled that fact over and over again, stupidly, thickly, as though his brain could grasp nothing beyond it.
She was dead. And Pierrot was dead.
And he, in a few minutes, had accomplished it all.

He turned back toward the cabin—not by the trail over which he had pursued Nepeese, but straight through the thick bush. Great flakes of snow had begun to fall. He looked at the sky, where banks of dark clouds were rolling up from the south and east.
The sun went out. Soon there would be a storm—a heavy snowstorm. The big flakes falling on his naked hands and face set his mind to work. It was lucky for him, this storm. It would cover everything—the fresh trails, even the grave he would dig for Pier-rot.

It does not take such a man as the Factor long to recover from a moral convulsion. By the time he came in sight of the cabin his mind was again at work on physical things—on the necessities of the situation. The appalling thing, after all, was not that both Pierrot and Nepeese were dead, but that his dream was shattered. It was not that Nepeese was dead, but that he had lost her. This was his vital disappointment. The other thing —his crime—was easy to cover.

It was not sentiment that made him dig Pierrot's grave close to the princess's mother's under the tall spruce.
It was not sentiment that made him dig the grave at all, but caution. He buried Pierrot decently. Then he poured Pierrot's stock of kerosene where it would be most effective and touched a match to it. He stood in the edge of the forest until the cabin was a mass of flames. The snow was falling thickly. The freshly made grave was a white mound, and the trails were filling. For the physical things he had done there was no fear in Bush McTaggart's heart as he turned back toward Lac Bain. No one would ever look into the grave of Pierrot du Quesne. And there was no one to betray him if such a miracle happened. But of one thing his black soul would never be able to free itself. Always he would see the pale, triumphant face of the Willow as she stood facing him in that moment of her glory when, even as she was choosing death rather than him, he had cried to himself: "Ah! Is she not wonderful!"

As Bush McTaggart had forgotten Barée, so Barée had forgotten the Factor from Lac Bain. When McTaggart had run along the edge of the chasm, Barée had squatted himself in the foot-beaten plot of snow where Nepeese had last stood, his body stiffened and his forefeet braced as he looked down. He had seen her take the leap. Many times that summer he had followed her in her daring dives into the deep, quiet water of the pool. But this was a tremendous distance. She had never dived into a place like that.

He could see the black heads of the rocks, appearing and disappearing in the whirling foam like the heads of monsters at play; the roar of the water filled him with dread; his eyes caught the swift rush of crumbled ice between the rock walls. And she had gone down there!

He had a great desire to follow her, to jump in, as he had always jumped in after her. She was surely down there, even though he could not see her. Probably she was playing among the rocks and hiding herself in the white froth and wondering why he didn't come. But he hesitated—hesi-tated with his head and neck over the abyss, and his forefeet giving way a little in the snow. With an effort he dragged himself back and whined. He barked—the short, sharp signal with which he always called her. There was no answer. Again and again he barked, and always there was nothing but the roar of the water that came back to him.

The snow was falling now, and Mc-Taggart had returned to the cabin.
After a little Barée followed in the trail he had made along the edge of the chasm, and wherever McTaggart had stopped to peer over, Barée paused also. For a space his hatred of the man was burned up in his desire to join the Willow, and he continued along the gorge until, a quarter of a mile beyond where the Factor had last looked into it, he came to the narrow trail down which he and Nepeese had many times adventured in quest of rock-violets. The twisting path that led down the face of the cliff was filled with snow now, but Barée cleared his way through it until at last he stood at the edge of the unfrozen torrent. Nepeese was not here. He whined, and barked again, but this time there was in his signal to her an uneasy repression, a whim-pering note which told that he did not expect a reply. For five minutes after that he sat on his haunches in the snow, stolid as a rock. What it was that came down out of the dark mystery and tumult of the chasm to him, what spirit-whispers of nature that told him the truth, it is beyond the power of reason to explain. But he listened, and he looked; and his muscles twitched as the truth grew in him; and at last he raised his head slowly until his black muzzle pointed to the white storm in the sky, and out of his throat there went forth the quavering, long-drawn howl of the husky who mourns outside the tepee of a master who is newly dead.

On the trail, heading for Lac Bain, Bush McTaggart heard that cry and shivered.

It was the smell of smoke, thickening in the air until it stung his nostrils, that drew Barée at last away from the chasm and back to the cabin.
There was not much left when he came to the clearing. Where the cabin had been was a red-hot, smoldering mass. For a long time he sat watching it, still waiting and still listening. He no longer felt the effect of the bullet that had stunned him, but his senses were undergoing another change now, as strange and unreal as their struggle against that darkness of near-death in the cabin.
In a space that had not covered more than an hour the world had twisted itself grotesquely for Barée. That long ago the Willow was sitting before her little mirror in the cabin talking to him and laughing in her happiness, while he lay in vast contempt on the floor. And now there was no cabin, no Nepeese, no Pierrot.
He did not go nearer to the smoldering mass of the cabin, but slinking low, made his way about the circle of the open to the dog-corral. This took him under the tall spruce. For a full minute he paused here, sniffing at the freshly made mound under its white mantle of snow. When he went on, he slunk still lower, and his ears were flat against his head.

The dog-corral was open and empty.
McTaggart had seen to that. Again Barée squatted back on his haunches and sent forth the death-howl. This time it was for Pierrot. In it there was a different note from that of the

She Was Not at the Tepee.

howl he had sent forth from the chasm: it was positive, certain. In the chasm his cry had been tempered with doubt—a questioning hope, something that was so almost human that McTaggart had shivered on the trail.
But Barée knew what lay in that freshly dug snow-covered grave. A scant three feet of earth could not hide its secret from him. There was death—definite and unequivocal. But for Nepeese he was still hoping and seeking.

Until noon he did not go far from the cabin, but only once did he actually approach and sniff about the black pile of steaming timbers. Again and again he circled the edge of the clearing, keeping just within the bush and timber, sniffing the air and listening.
Twice he went back to the chasm.
Late in the afternoon there came to him a sudden impulse that carried him swiftly through the forest. He did not run openly now; caution, suspicion and fear had roused in him afresh the instincts of the wolf. With his ears flattened against the side of his head, his tail drooping until the tip of it dragged the snow and his back sagging in the curious, evasive gait of the wolf, he scarcely made himself distinguishable from the shadows of the spruce and balsams.

There was no faltering in the trail Barée made; it was straight as a rope might have been drawn through the forest, and it brought him, early in the dusk, to the open spot where Nepeese had fled with him that day she had pushed McTaggart over the edge of the precipice into the pool. In the place of the balsam shelter of that day there was now a water-tight birch-bark tepee which Pierrot had helped the Willow to make during the summer. Barée went straight to it and thrust in his head with a low and expectant whine.

There was no answer. It was dark and cold in the tepee. He could make out indistinctly the two blankets that were always in it, the row of big tin boxes in which Nepeese kept their stores, and the stove which Pierrot had improvised out of scraps of iron and heavy tin. But Nepeese was not there. And there was no sign of her outside. The snow was unbroken except by his own trail. It was dark when he returned to the burned cabin.

All that night he hung about the deserted dog-corral, and all through the night the snow fell steadily, so that by dawn he sank into it to his shoulders when he moved out into the clearing.

With day the sky had cleared. The sun came up, and the world was almost too dazzling for the eyes. It warmed Barée's blood with new hope and expectation. His brain struggled even more eagerly than yesterday to comprehend. Surely the Willow would be returning soon! He would hear her voice. She would appear suddenly out of the forest. He would receive some signal from her. One of these things, or all of them, must happen.
He stopped sharply in his tracks at every sound, and sniffed the air from every point of the wind. He was traveling ceaselessly.

His body made deep trails in the snow around and over the huge white mound where the cabin had stood; his tracks led from the corral to the tall spruce, and they were as numerous as the footprints of a wolf-pack for half a mile up and down the chasm.

On the afternoon of this day the second big impulse came to him. It was not reason, and neither was it instinct alone. It was the struggle halfway between, the brute mind fighting at its best with the mystery of an inintelligible thing—something that could not be seen by the eye or heard by the ear. Nepeese was not in the cabin, because there was no cabin. She was not at the tepee. He could find no trace of her in the chasm. She was not with Pierrot under the big spruce.

Therefore, unreasoning but sure, he began to follow the old trap-line into the north and west.

No man has ever looked clearly into the mystery of death as it is impinged upon the senses of the northern dog.
It comes to him, sometimes, with the wind; most frequently it must come with the wind, and yet there are ten thousand masters in the northland who will swear that their dogs have given warning of death hours before it actually came; and there are many of these thousands who know from experience that their teams will stop a quarter of a mile from a stranger cabin in which there is unburied dead.

Yesterday Barée had smelled death, and he knew without process of reasoning that the dead was Pierrot. How he knew this, and why he accepted the fact as inevitable, is one of the mysteries which at times seems to give the direct challenge to those who concede nothing more than instinct to the brute mind. He knew that Pierrot was dead without exactly knowing what death was. But of one thing he was sure: he would never see Pierrot again; he would never hear his voice again; he would never hear again the swish-swish-swish of his snowshoes in the trail ahead, and so on the trap-line he did not look for Pierrot. Pier-rot was gone forever. But Barée had not yet associated death with Nepeese.
He believed that Nepeese was alive, and he was now just as sure that he would overtake her on the trap-line as he was positive yesterday that he would find her at the birch-bark tepee.

Since yesterday morning's breakfast with the Willow, Barée had gone without eating; to appease his hunger meant to hunt, and his mind was too filled with his quest of Nepeese for that. He would have gone hungry all that day, but in the third mile from the cabin he came to a trap in which there was a big snowshoe rabbit.
The rabbit was still alive, and he killed it and ate his fill. Until dark he did not miss a trap. In one of them there was a lynx; in another a fisher-cat; out on the white surface of a lake he sniffed at a snowy mound under which lay the body of a red fox killed by one of Pierrot's poison baits.
Both the lynx and the fisher-cat were alive, and the steel chains of their traps clanked sharply as they prepared to give Barée battle. But Barée was uninterested. He hurried on, his uneasiness growing as the day darkened and he found no sign of the Willow.

Odd Slavery Conditions

There is much corroborative testimony and numerous references to the facts that there were at the outbreak of the Civil war a very large number of free negroes and that these negroes in many cases owned property and slaves. These latter, however, were usually members of their families whom they had redeemed and whom they held as slaves technically on account of the laws of many states which prohibited the manumitted slaves from remaining in the state or territory. In many cases the slave-holder, while himself originally a slave, had received his freedom before certain laws went into effect which were not retroactive.

WHAT DO MARKS ON REPORT CARDS MEAN?

The marking system was put in to schools as a convenient and simple way to record the achievement of the children. The Passing Grade was set at 60 per cent in some places, 70 per cent in others, and 75 per cent in still others. Local conditions were studied and if it was found that pupil accomplishment was low in a certain community the passing grade was set at 60 per cent in order to let certain number through the "lock system" each year. As a result most children see no reason why they should try to make more than the passing grade since they are chiefly interested in passing through the more or less meaningful ordeal of getting a diploma.

What does a passing grade of 75 percent mean? It may mean two things, either the pupil has mastered a few things and has entirely neglected other units or he may have a smattering knowledge of all the material covered. For example, he may have received 100 percent or mastery in addition, subtraction and multiplication, and have entirely neglected division, or he may know enough in all four units to get by. In most cases, however, the achievement of the passing grade means that the pupil has "slipshod", careless, and neglected work in everything. He may know some elements of addition so that he can use them but a great many of the elements he does not have on a useable level and so on thru out his school work. A passing grade is really a blanket which tries to hide his weak spots rather than bring them to light where they may be remedied. I am sure we would not permit an electrician to install electric lights in our homes on a 75 per cent efficiency basis. The electrician holds his permit because he has mastered his trade. He mastered it largely due to his own effort. Likewise the student must exert his own effort to master the material to be learned. The teacher can do little if the pupil is not willing and anxious to overcome his tasks. When an employer looks over the school record of the applicant does this supposedly valuable blanket record help him in choosing the right person? May be the very elements which have been neglected in this child's education are the ones he will need in his new job. As I see it, the ordinary school marks mean nothing definite to the parents, nor to the future employer.

I have thought of a plan of marking which I would like you to consider. The following example is not complete but is meant to be merely suggestive. First of all the public should decide upon the qualities of character and personality, the understandings, the ideals, the habits and the attitudes it would like the finished school product to contain in a functional way. Then it would be the task of the teachers to exert all their efforts in helping the child who wants to be changed to acquire these traits. This way there would be a definite list of things to master and the only satisfactory attainment would be mastery, at least on the functional level, of each one of these items. The periodic school report would be something like this: John Jones acts honestly, thoughtfully, in all his relations with others; he adds and performs all the arithmetical operations accurately and quickly; he reads silently and orally to a satisfactory level of speed and comprehension and has developed an interest which enables him to read in the fields of Religion, Science, and History at the rate of (three books a month during his spare time); he understands the following units of history and uses them on the highest level that his mental development will permit: Ancient Period, Greek Period, and Roman Period. He has the following attitudes as the first school semester of 1926 closes: open mindedness, fairness, and cleanness. He believes that War is wrong, he believes in the enforcement of every law until he can by his privilege of free speech have it lawfully repealed. He believes in the abolition of the use of intoxicating liquors.

He has developed these attitudes through the consideration of all the facts available to him at the present time. If facts are produced which make these attitudes untenable he will change them, but until that time he is acting on the basis of these attitudes. He is healthy and follows such health habits as: taking time to eat, drinking at least six glasses of water daily, smoking no cigarettes, and playing healthful games. Some of the many adaptations he is trying consciously and wholeheartedly to bring about in his life are; absolute concentration of attention on what he is doing, especially in his study, a mastery of the social conventions of courtesy, and politeness, mastery of shorthand, and the Medieval Period in history. His ideals for the guiding of his life are; the spotless life of a gentleman, a manly Christ-like character and the best farmer in the Township. His parents will please carefully check over and pass upon his attainment of these items in his home life. Any items which the parents note are being insufficiently taught and mastered will receive further attention at your Friday October 22. Moving picture: "The Knockout", featuring Milton Sills, in a drama of the north woods.

Friday Oct. 29th. Betty Bronson in a love story in Old New York of 1850, "Not So Long Ago."

A new schedule for the winter months will soon be published. Watch for some very attractive offerings, beginning with November.

Sunday October 24th.

Bible school at 9:30. Our attendance is increasing, but there is room for improvement. Do you think that one hour per week is too much religious education for your children—or for yourself? If it is not too much—you will not deprive either yourself or your children—that means you will come.

Morning worship 10:30. The second of a new series of sermons on "What We Need Most And How To Get It". You should not miss the discussion of life's most vital topic. If you will carefully follow this set of discussions and do some thinking you are sure that you will take "A new lease on life." Incidentally worship cures the "blues" and that tired feeling and American restlessness. Have you honestly tried it?

Evening service: A union one with Palos Park, Oak Lawn and Worth at the Worth Community Church. This will be something absolutely unique. A Candle Light Communion Service. The public is most cordially invited. Do not miss it.

On Thursday October 14th the annual bazaar and supper of the Ladies Guild of the church was held in the church basement. It was a real success and the patronage was so large that the ladies were taxed to the utmost to meet the demands which were made upon them. It is said to be one of the best attended "annuals" which the ladies have ever had. Congratulations.

The evening piano recitals by Miss Clarice Mahaffy, Miss Lylas Kay, Miss Lois Ludwig and Miss Evelyn Hansen during the past few Sunday evenings have been greatly appreciated by all who are attending the Sunday evening services. It is expected that this feature of our evening services will be continued.

The discussion on the general topic "How To Find God" was most enthusiastic on Sunday evening October 17th. Many took part and all registered much interest. The pastor is the leader.

Miss Iva and Evelyn Hansen are going to Chicago during the winter months. They are staying with one of their aunts.

On Thursday Oct. 14th Tom Richards the new Wabash "third trick" man was taken to the Decatur Wabash Hospital for an operation—presumably tonsillitis. At this writing no definite reports have been received.

Mr. A. W. Lind of Seattle Wash. a friend of the pastor and a Research fellow at the University of Chicago was a week end guest at the parsonage.

The regular Quarterly Official Board meeting of the Orland M. E. Church was held at the John Loebe home on Tuesday evening Oct. 12. All departments of church work seem to be in a good condition.

ST. MICHAEL'S CATH. CHURCH

St. Michael's Church is to start a novena—a nine days prayer—on Saturday the 23rd in preparation of the great new Feast of the Kingship of Christ which is to be celebrated yearly throughout the Catholic world on the last Sunday of October.

The net proceeds of the bazaar were eleven hundred seventy dollars. This results shows marvelous interest on the part of parishioners and friends.

The work of remodeling the garage into a temporary rectory starts this week. The men of the congregation have been invited to aid in the preliminary labor.

CHRIST LUTHERAN CHURCH

English services will be held on Sunday morning with communion.

The Young People's Society will hold a bunco party at the Lutheran school on October 27th.

The annual bazaar will be held by the Ladies Aid on November 10th.

To me such a report would not only be good but it would be good for something. It would place the emphasis in the right place. While the child was of school age, he would be attending school for those much desired intrinsic rewards rather than those fleeting and indefinite rewards in the form of grades on his periodic report card.

HUGH S. MAGILL FOR U. S. SENATOR

Greatest Political Battle in Years; Is Revolt Against Corrupt Politics and for Decent Government.

Illinois' greatest political battle for clean politics and decent state government is on with Hugh S. Magill, independent Republican candidate for United States senator, a former state senator and author of the Illinois woman's suffrage bill, developing a daily increasing strength that is astonishing leaders of both political machines.

Hugh S. Magill.

Not since the memorable political battle of Lincoln and Douglas has so spectacular a contest been staged. Nor has there been more at stake. Lincoln led the fight for a principle. Hugh S. Magill is standing on the principle of clean politics and honest government.

Downstate men and women have responded to his straightforward and honest presentation of the issue. Downstate newspapers which put good citizenship and honest government above party affiliations are falling in line and taking up the fight. The metropolitan press of Chicago is attracted by the struggle for political decency in Illinois, and is giving unprecedented publicity to his campaign.

The time has come for political housecleaning in Illinois, is the report that is coming in from all over the state. Now is the time for the men and women of Illinois to wrest its government from the gang politicians. If it is not done now it cannot be done two years hence for the crooked politicians will only be the more firmly seated.

Hugh S. Magill stands four-square on the campaign's principal issue—clean politics and honest government. He is a dry by conviction; not for political expediency. He does not let the prohibition issue divert him from the bigger principle of morality and decency in government.

He is experienced in politics but not a professional politician. His leadership in this fight has lifted the issue above party affiliations and places it on the high plane of good citizenship.

Mr. Magill puts the question squarely before the voters. Do they want to elect Frank L. Smith, the candidate of Gov. Len Small and the crooked Chicago and Cook county Republican machine? Mr. Smith admits accepting over $125,000 from Samuel Insull, head of the public utilities companies of Chicago, for his primary campaign expenses. He can see no wrong in this, although at that time he was head of the state public utilities commission. He says the utilities have gotten nothing back from the gift, so why should the people complain? If the utilities have not obtained anything yet, does Mr. Smith expect to deliver to them at some future date? If he does not expect to deliver to them, how will he repay this favor?

George E. Brennan, the Democratic boss of Chicago, is tarred with the same stick. He also accepted money for his primary campaign expenses from Mr. Insull.

It is perfectly apparent that the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, George B. Safford, cannot deliver the church vote of Illinois to Frank L. Smith. Many of the most prominent church leaders in all the downstate cities have denounced in the strongest terms the attempts of the Anti-Saloon League to deliver the moral and religious forces of Illinois to Frank L. Smith and the rotten Len Small machine.

Mr. Magill was born in Illinois and is a graduate of the Illinois Wesleyan university at Bloomington. He was assistant principal of the Springfield schools and superintendent at Princeton. He was president of the Illinois State Teachers' association in 1914. He is a Mason and a Shriner.

From Who's Who in America.

Member, Illinois senate, 1911-13; author Illinois woman's suffrage law, also educational and reform laws. President Illinois State Teachers' association, 1914. Republican. Mason (32nd degree, K. Lesson for October 24

JOSHUA, ISRAEL'S NEW LEADER

LESSON TEXT—Num. 27:18-20; Joshua 1:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord, thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Joshua the New Leader.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Task of Joshua. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Secret of a Strong and Useful Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Preparation for True Service.

The book of Joshua, from which our lesson is taken, is a history of the conquest of the promised land and its division among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character, Joshua.

I. Joshua, the New Leader of Israel (Num. 27:18-20).

The people were not to be left in doubt as to a leader when Moses was gone. The leader was to be appointed and given recognition before all the congregation.

During the wilderness journey Joshua was Moses' minister and the captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Canaan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name "Joshua" has the same derivation as the name "Jesus."

II. Joshua Commanded to Take Charge (Josh. 1:2).

Moses was dead, but God's work must go on, therefore God issued the command for the new leader to assume his duty.

III. God Renews His Promise to Israel Concerning the Land (Josh. 1:3, 4).

This promise had been given to Abraham and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel as they were about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were "from the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the River Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun." The nearest this territory was ever possessed was during the reign of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This land still belongs to the Jews, and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them that wherever their feet stood upon the land it was theirs.

IV. God's Presence Promised (Josh. 1:5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said as He was with Moses, so He would be with him. The difficulties before him were:

1. The Jordan river (v. 2).

This river was now at its flood (Josh. 3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross.

2. The people were living in walled cities (Num. 13:28).

Notwithstanding this, God was ready to insure success.

(1) "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5).

(2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee."

(3) "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee." Joshua had been with Moses throughout their forty years' experience from the Egyptian deliverance to the time of his death. Because he believed that God was with his master, he was willing and ready to cross the Jordan at its floodtide and courageously meet the enemies on the other side.

V. Conditions of Blessing in the Land (Josh. 1:6-9).

1. "Be strong and of good courage" (v. 6).

His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. It required strength and courage to do this.

2. "Unwavering obedience to the Word of God (v. 7).

In a land of idolatry it required much courage to be true to God. Prosperity and success were conditioned upon unswerving obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined therein would bring disaster and ruin. In order to accomplish this the law of the Lord must be in his mouth continually. He was to meditate therein day and night.

Joshua rendered prompt obedience, he did not stop to cavil, but at once gave order for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions.

MORE POWER AND SUPERIOR QUALITY

Scientists say that we retain the brain cells of our youth. That explains a whole lot.

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

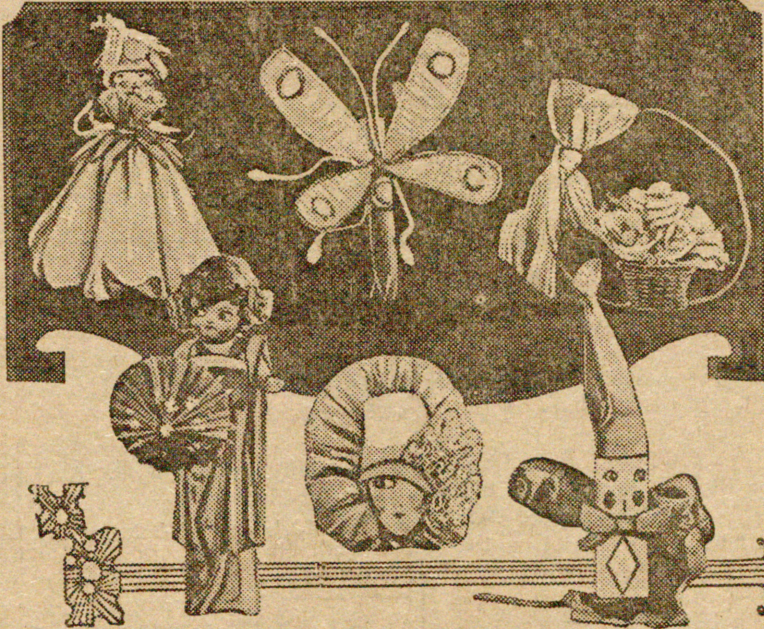

WHAT satisfaction there is to the hostess who knows that everybody is having a good time at her party. And what fun to listen to the ohs and ahs of the guests as they make merry over the cunning party favors, for favors have so much to do with the success of one's party.

Now that the fall and winter party season is just beginning, it is high time for those who plan to entertain to get busy at making up a collection of pretty favors. Here's a new idea—harmonica favors for the men and rose pincushions for the ladies. Try it and see how beautifully it will choose any material just so it's velvet seems to be the sentiment of the mode. It is evident that velvet will reign, is reigning; as the fabric supreme. Not that velvet in itself is a novelty, but its uses for all occasions gives to it a unique interpretation.

The new velvets are both printed and plain, in both chiffon and heavy-weight and are the called-for fabric for street, dinner and evening costume.

For daytime wear the ensemble of extreme style is of velvet, black or deep beautiful colors such as claret, work out. For the harmonica, cover little boxes with white crepe paper, painting on it a face with water colors. Make wire arms, black felt cut out of mat stock, dress in emerald-green tissue. Study the little figure shown last in this group as to just how it should look. When each male guest starts to play on the little harmonica, he found in the box, no question as to the fun and din which will follow.

Some Pretty Favors.

The rose pincushion takes form of a dainty little basket filled with flowers, just as you can see at the top to the right in the picture. Make seven little tissue paper rosebuds with soft cushionlike centers. Shape these into a bouquet and set them in a paper nut cup, attaching a paper-wound wire handle. Into the hearts of the roses stick a few pins just as a suggestion jungle green, also beige. With this is interworked for blouse and lining-gorgeous silks and metal cloths.

As a trimming for crepe and satin dresses self-colored velvet is a most popular theme. The velvet appears in tiers and borderings.

Quite the latest and most charming Paris style note is the chiffon velvet evening frock in lovely colorings. A very beautiful Agnes model is shown in the picture. Melon pink chiffon velvet is the medium for this exquisite creation. The V-neck and the profuse shirring are outstanding features. The panels are embroidered in pearls.

Very effective is the sleeveless low round-neck black velvet frock. Such a dress will prove at once a luxury and an economy, in that with change of accessories it can be transformed to the recipient as to the use of this little flower basket.

It is always more difficult to think of favors for men than for women. The fantastic beetle which is pictured second at the top is exceedingly clever, especially if laid flat with its wire legs sprawling out in every direction. Its body is really a cigar held in place by coils of wire or rings of pasteboard if preferred.

In this group is also a cigarette favor. A coquettish face is painted on an oval piece of cardboard. The ruffle of tissue pasted around it is one and a half inches wide. A green feather trims the hat.

The Japanese lady carries some chosen article back of her parasol. There is also a halloween figure shown here dressed in pumpkin-yellow paper.

For our hats, our wraps, our frocks, in appearance and thus do duty for many a social occasion. A deep lace or flesh-colored georgette cape-collar is suggested. It would be well also to have made to order a pair of detachable pink crepe sleeves. Removable and gayly embroidered peasant sleeves would prove effective also—or without any accessories, except costume jewelry and a shoulder bouquet, the sleeveless black velvet gown is a happy possession.

The last word in fashion is the pastel-colored chiffon velvet two-piece frock for sports wear. It is styled similar to the crepe jumper-and-skirt models so popular during the summer.

Plaid velvet tunics are registered for smart daytime wear. Brocade chiffon velvet is also fashionable for the dresser afternoon frock.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN BORN IN SAME YEAR

Queen Victoria and Lydia E. Pinkham

MRS. ANNA MCHENRY
1005 E. PLUM STREET, MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far-reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Marshall, Illinois.—"After my second child was born, I never saw a well day for five years. My father was telling his druggist about my condition, and the druggist insisted that father take a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have me try it, as it had helped his wife. I had given up, but to please father and mother, I commenced taking your medicine and in a week I had begun to feel better. When I passed through the Change of Life, I was taking the Vegetable Compound and I had no trouble of any kind."—Mrs. ANNA MCHENRY, 1005 E. Plum St., Marshall, Illinois.

Another Woman Helped

Philadelphia, Penna.—Mrs. Caroline Nagy, of 2717 Sears St., in a recent letter to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., says that after her child was born she was in a very weak condition. She could not seem to regain her health and went to her mother for advice. She told her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it had helped her when in like condition, and it has helped her mother also. So Mrs. Nagy started taking it. She felt better after taking the first bottle, after taking six bottles her weakness and other troubles disappeared, and she is never done praising the Compound.

In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
